The project consists in the construction of a private house on three levels on a 6.50x14.00 meters area. The long shape of the site made it necessary to convey natural light into the center of the building. For this purpose, the entire volume was excavated, holed vertically and horizontally in order to create air channels that allow light coming from above and from the two facades. In order to control solar irradiation, the volumes of the loggias were appropriately inclined and oriented.
